Further Information on UA 79/09 (AFR 24/003/2009, 19 March 2009) Torture/Denial of medical treatment

EQUATORIAL GUINEA

Epifanio Pascual Nguema Alogo (m)
José Eworo Mba (m)

The police have agreed to allow Epifanio Pascual Nguema Alogo to receive medical treatment. On 23 March he was transferred to a clinic in Bata where he is receiving treatment for injuries caused by torture. His health is improving: he is in less pain and is passing less blood in his urine. He is expected to remain in hospital at least until 10 April. He is still formally under arrest, but, he is not under police guard. However, a soldier visits him regularly, apparently to ensure he is still in hospital and to check on his recovery.

José Eworo Mba is now known to have joint Spanish and Equatorial Guinean nationality; he works as a security guard in the town in Spain where he lives. He was arrested two days after arriving in Bata. The police confiscated his documents; they have now returned his passport, but retained the identity card issued by the company he works for, which they claim is a Spanish police identification card. In addition to accusing him of spying for the Spanish government, the police have accused José Eworo Mba of theft, without saying what he is supposed to have stolen. It is not clear whether he is receiving medical treatment for his diabetes.
