UA 254/05 Fear for safety / Intimidation

26 September 2005

HONDURAS Dr Juan Almdares Bonilla (m), Executive Director of Centre for the Prevention, Rehabilitation and Treatment of Victims of Torture (Centro de Prevención, Tratamiento y Rehabilitación de las Víctimas de Tortura y sus Familiares, CPTRT)

Amnesty International is concerned for the safety of Dr Juan Almdares Bonilla who is being threatened and harassed as a result of his work as a human rights defender.

On 12 September, Dr Juan Almdares Bonilla was intercepted by two men on a motorcycle when he got out of his car near the entrance of a clinic where he provides free medical care. The men are described as well built, and aged between 30 and 35 years. They also had a military style hair cut. One of the men put a 9mm gun to Dr Almdares left temple and demanded his mobile phone before they both rode off.

Although this could be seen as an ordinary criminal offence the circumstances in which it took place would indicate that it was a premeditated and targeted event. The fact that the men did not steal other objects of value, such as Dr Almdares Bonilla's wallet, would indicate that they stole the phone with the purpose of obtaining information about his contacts and the people he works with.

During the night of 18 September, unknown individuals (men and women) made phone calls to Dr Almdares Bonilla's home and his relatives' homes. They asked about his whereabouts in threatening tones and similar calls have been made several times a week for the last three months.

On 19 September, the office administrator at the CPTRT office in the capital Tegucigalpa arrived at work to find that the front door frame had been forced and nearly broken during an attempted burglary. This followed an earlier break-in in October 2004 (see fu ua 141/03, AMR 37/012/2004, 1 November 2004).

BACKGROUND INFORMATION

Honduran human rights defenders are frequently attacked threatened and intimidated because of their legitimate activities. During 2005 a number of them working on different issues including defence of the environment, peasants' organizations and indigenous issues have faced threats. The authorities rarely investigate these cases effectively, thus encouraging those responsible to continue in the knowledge that their impunity is all but guaranteed. CPTRT has frequently criticized the government on issues such as the involvement of the police in extrajudicial executions of children and prison conditions.
