REPUBLIC OF MALDIVES Ahamed Shafeeq, aged 67, former civil servant, writer
Ali Moosa Didi, writer and politician
Mohamed Shafeeq, former civil servant
and one other (name unknown)

Amnesty International remains concerned about the health of Ahamed Shafeeq and Ali Moosa Didi who were arrested on 21 April 1995.

Ahamed Shafeeq was transferred from Male' police headquarters to house arrest on 1 July. He is now permitted to receive visitors and use the telephone. To date, he has not been charged or brought before a court. He is said to be an asthma-sufferer and to have a lung infection. He has also been diagnosed by a psychiatrist as suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder and has been advised to avoid stressful situations; Amnesty International is concerned that anxiety caused to Ahamed Shafeeq by being held under house arrest may aggravate his already poor physical and mental condition.

Ali Moosa Didi returned to Male' from hospital treatment in Trivandrum, India on 10 July. He was immediately taken to Dhoonidhoo detention centre. To Amnesty International's knowledge, his relatives have not been allowed to see him.

Reports have also been received that Ahamed Shafeeq's son, Mohammed Shafeeq, was arrested on 17 July. He was seen being taken to Dhoonidoo detention centre on that day. Amnesty International is concerned that Ali Moosa Didi and Mohamed Shafeeq may be subjected to torture or ill-treatment while in custody at Dhoonidhoo detention centre.

Amnesty International has also learned that a third person, who was present at the time of Ahamed Shafeeq's and Ali Moosa Didi's arrest in April, was taken into custody in early July. The organization is currently seeking more information from the government about his arrest.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION

Over the last few years, Amnesty International has received several reports that political and other prisoners have been subjected to torture or ill-treatment and that confessions were made under duress. Before they are brought to trial, political prisoners are either kept at Male' police headquarters or at Dhoonidhoo detention centre, which also comes under the direct responsibility of the police. Several prisoners who have been held at Dhoonidhoo have complained of ill-treatment there during the period of their interrogation. Some say they were held in solitary confinement for several months after denying knowledge of the charges against them. Some were held in solitary confinement for as long as 18 or 24 months. Some say that for up to about six weeks, during the period of solitary confinement, they were held in handcuffs joined together by a single hinge which greatly restricted their movement, interfering with their ability to eat and to keep themselves clean. These restraints chafed the skin, and some prisoners complained of lasting stiffness and weakness in their limbs as a result. They report that the cells in which they were held were very small - about four or five feet by seven or eight feet - and made from corrugated iron sheets which became very hot.

In a reply to members of Amnesty International who sent urgent appeals on behalf of Ahamed Shafeeq and Ali Moosa Didi, the Director of the Ministry of Information and Culture in the Maldives stated: "The [above] two men have been taken into custody on charges of having contravened the law and are not prisoners of conscience. Investigations into their case are under way. While it is true that Mr. Shafeeq was sent to Madras for medical treatment, I wish to inform you that he was sent to India for treatment at the expense of the Government of the Maldives."
