COTE D'IVOIRE: LAUNCH OF MUSIC CASSETTE FOR AMNESTY INTERNATIONAL CAMPAIGN

"I am an active member of Amnesty International in Côte d'Ivoire. In my country, we have decided to act to put an end to extrajudicial executions and political killings. Every one of us was asked to put all his energies into it because, in this field, remaining impassive is more criminal than what we are opposing. Only our action can end the situation."

These are the words of the well-known African musician Waby Spider, whose cassette "Maagizo" is to be launched on 10 December, Human Rights Day, at a press conference in Côte d'Ivoire as part of Amnesty International's major international Campaign against "Disappearances" and Political Killings. Waby Spider, one of West Africa's most popular musicians, will be giving a speech at a press conference held in the Ivorian capital of Abidjan by the Ivorian section of Amnesty International. All proceeds from the cassette will go to the section.

"Maagizo" (which means "message" in Swahili) is a cassette of eight songs all on the theme of human rights. They are recorded in five major African languages and a variety of musical styles, including African jazz and reggae. In his speech Waby Spider talks about the "assassination" of democracy in Africa, despite the ratification of the African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights by most African states. "The African Charter is not respected by the States which ratified it", he says. The songs featured on "Maagizo" are an expression of the different human rights contained in the African Charter. Alongside an Amnesty International publication "Guide to the African Charter", the songs aim to increase awareness and understanding of the Charter in Africa.

On behalf of Amnesty International's Côte d'Ivoire section, Waby Spider will be touring Benin, Ghana, Nigeria and Sierra Leone as a speaker for the human rights organisation's Campaign against "Disappearances" and Political Killings.
