

human rights missions have been expelled with no opportunity to have their cases judicially reviewed prior to their deportation. Also, the draconian new visa regulations brought in last May have hampered their work.

As well as showing official contempt for human rights work, these measures send the wrong message to paramilitary groups and could have tragic consequences for the local peasant communities and for Mexican human rights defenders.

ENDS.../